

Cambridge Assessment International Education

Mark Cavone
Regional Director, North America
Cambridge Assessment International Education

Short Biography

Mark Cavone is the Regional Director, North America for Cambridge Assessment International Education. Mark leads all higher education and schools development activities, as well as marketing and operations for the United States and Canada. Mark and his team, are responsible for growing and supporting Cambridge primary and secondary schools and higher education institutions across North America. Cambridge Assessment International Education is a part of the University of Cambridge.

Prior to joining Cambridge International, Mark was Executive Director, Program Operations, for the College Board's Advanced Placement program. In this role, he directed all facets of College Board's Advanced Placement (AP) program. He had the responsibility for oversight of the development and delivery of AP scores to students and educators annually. Mark started his career in the education industry in 2004 when he joined the College Board to work in SAT assessment operations and was the Director of SAT Registration Operations. He later joined the AP program in New York City.

Mark spent the first part of his professional career in the consumer packaged goods industry working for Nestle, USA, and Altria, Inc. He holds an MBA from Pace University and a Bachelor's degree from Syracuse University.